Andrew Carnegie's Religion.

"Count me as one who loves his fellow men." The Abou Ben Adhem enthusiasm is perhaps the best formulation of the creed that Andrew Carnegie preached and practiced. We may imagine that if he had been picking out a text for a funeral discourse over his own mortal remains he would have chosen I John 6:20: "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" He is said to have remarked in giving money for a fine church organ: "I can always accept as orthodox what the organist offers to the services." This is a thought cognate to the epigram of George Bernard Shaw: "A fine cathedral would be a marvelous educating influence for the masses if people would not desecrate it by holding services there," an epigram which Mr. Carnegie may have smiled over but would not have accepted. Probably, however, the Froude saying: "The Lord was the author of religion; but the devil invented theology," would not have shocked him.

It is not likely that the obsequies at Lenox were actually delayed by the difficulty of selecting a clergyman and a ritual for the funeral, yet the question may have come up, probably did come up. The composite Presbyterian and Congregationalist service determined on at Shadowbrook was the best solution.

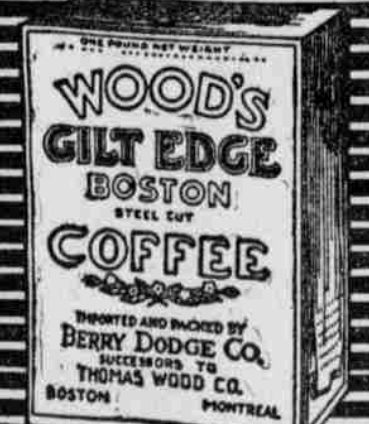

This passage from "The Gospel of Wealth" shows that the philanthropist, through keeping his own mind fixed on practical and more or less material problems, realized the charm of devotionism in the church:

"Once within its massive circle, its denizens live there an inner life more precious than the external, and all their ways are hallowed by the radiance which shines from afar upon this inner life, glorifying everything and keeping all right within."

St. Thomas a Kempis might have written those words. Often and forcefully Mr. Carnegie wrote and spoke of the usefulness of the church to civilization, of his own faith in an overruling Providence. Without that faith his life could not have been what it was.—Brooklyn Eagle.

MONTPELIER

New Brick-Making Project Seems to Be Assured for the City.

The committee which is canvassing the city for the sale of $25,000 of preferred stock for the new brick company is meeting with good success, and Monday evening all but $2,500 of the amount needed had been subscribed, and it is expected that the subscription will be completed today. The location of the plant is now a problem, for the persons of whom it was hoped to buy the land want a price which is out of proportion to what the land is valued for taxation purposes. They prefer to sell the whole farm, but it is not needed, so a new site will be secured.

The heavy fall of rain which fell in Barre on Sunday did not affect the water supply in the Berlin pond, so on Monday the water department started the boiler pumping the water over the neck between the upper and lower ponds.

Edward Brown of Nashua, N. H., is visiting with relatives in the city.

A meeting of the committee which has charge of the local arrangements for the teachers' convention was held Monday evening, when the plans were completed as far as possible at this time.

Henry Thornton, who was arrested on Sunday evening on the charge of breach of peace because he was making too much disturbance in his home on Langdon street, and attracted considerable excitement about the locality, pleaded guilty in Montpelier city court Monday afternoon and was given a fine of $10 and costs, which he paid. George Parsons also appeared in court on the charge of a third offense of intoxication. He said he was not guilty, and the court advised him that there was a sentence pending and that he might go back to jail until the court had time to decide the matter. Henan Bowers, who was arrested Monday morning, was not asked to plead, but was sentenced on a complaint against him under date of Aug. 16 to the house of correction for 11 or 12 months, after which the sentence was suspended and he will be committed to the state hospital.

Miss Genevieve Damon has gone to Queen City park, where she is visiting with the family of A. D. Harris.

Miss Eula Kelley is taking a vacation from her work in the state treasurer's office.

Merrill Harris has joined his mother and sister at camp at Queen City park.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Lavin and two daughters of Burlington, Samuel Lavin of New York, Mrs. Lewis Lavin and Sidney, her son, of New York City, have been visiting with the family of Isaac Verrill. They came here by automobile.

The state now has eight pieces of road construction under way, under federal aid. There are Marlboro, Williston, Irasburg, which are gravel; Colchester-Essex, concrete and Fairlee, macadam, which are being done by the contract, while the other three are being done on what is known as force account. These are Sherburne, Salisbury and Hardwick, in which the contract was not let, but the federal government will pay 50 per cent of the estimate made by its representative. If the state does it cheaper than the estimate, the state makes money; if it costs more than the estimate, then the state stands the additional expense. Pascal Ricci of Rutland was here yesterday to sign the contract for the Williston job. This makes two that he has been awarded. This one amounts to .9 of a mile. The other in Marlboro is 1.9 miles. C. G. Grifflin signed the Irasburg contract.

The picture of the late Ex-Gov. Bell has been completed and will soon be added to the collection of pictures of ex-governors in the executive chambers of the State House. This morning a seamstress was repairing the window draperies in the executive chambers. These are of heavy tapestry and the places where the creases occurred showed need of attention.

The will of Mary Coghlan, late of Montpelier, has been presented for probate. James A. Lynch of St. Albans has

PAPEC

The most popular blower in the world—why, because having six fans it requires less power to operate. When a man tries to sell you something, he says "good" and "bad" by asking how many fans his blower carries. A 12-in. blower having only two fans will hardly operate without clogging when run by a 12 h. p. engine. The same size with four fans will still when kitched up with an 8 to 10 h. p. but the Papec 12-in. with its six fans will need only a 6 h. p. engine to give complete satisfaction. That means the Papec is the only blower-cutter worth consideration by any man who cares enough about his business to get value received for his money. We used the first Papec ever brought into this country and run it with a 3 1/2 h. p. engine. We are still using the Papec. We still know it for the one best and only blower.
